THE BUILDING

140 West George Street occupies a prominent position within Glasgow's historic commercial core. West George Street emerged in the 19th century as part of the city's westward expansion, becoming synonymous with Victorian prosperity, finance and professional services.

Today, the building sits at the heart of this established business district, moments from Central Station and surrounded by leading offices, retail and hospitality. It offers occupiers a prestigious address that combines Glasgow's architectural heritage with modern city-centre connectivity and convenience.
